

Take our little test to see if you can benefit from our services:

Many choices present “red flags” that indicate issues need to be explored, to determine if the relationship is a good “fit” for the future.

- Do you and your partner argue a great deal?
- Does your partner ever assume responsibility for problems in the relationship?
- Does one person repeatedly sacrifice their needs to keep the peace?
- Does your partner always blame you?
- Does your partner try and isolate you from your friends and family?
- Do your close friends and family like and approve of the relationship?
- Do you handle finances in a similar way?
- What are your goals and dreams for the future?

Do any of these sound familiar? You may not even feel as if any of this is a problem, but your loved ones might.

More and more couples invest in pre-marital counseling, realizing that it allows the couple to explore and learn about important issues and skills that will enhance their future together.

This is where we come in.
